

Story #668 (1976, Tape #18)

Narrator: Mustafa Durmaz

Location: Village: Dağkadi;
kaza of Karacabey,
Province of Bursa

Date: February 1976

A Short and Sweet Tale

A poor old <sup>old</sup> man went to the market to see what food he might be able to purchase for his family with his meager funds. He came across a vendor of dried <sup>dried</sup> fruit and bought some of his produce. His wife praised him for his wise choice and told him to buy the same the next week.

So the old man went to the market place again the next week and found the same vendor. He had eggplants on display that week. The old man thought surely that this must be another type of dried fruit, and so he bought some. He took a bite of the eggplant but found that it was not only hard to chew, but also bitter instead of sweet. "Fah!" he said, "It is even worse than my old wife's dry cunt!"

But perhaps we had better not dwell on that, and so we shall keep our tale short and sweet.