My Darling Sweetheart,

Just a few minutes to write you and get in the office in time.

Another prop knocked out of our house proposition. Mr. Alexander does not want to rent, thinks he will soon sell and if he should decide to rent has promised a Mr. Murray first chance. In your dear sweet way of looking at things you tell me not to worry about the house. Dear girl I could be happy anywhere you are and wherever you are will be like heaven on earth to me, but the thing I do worry about is having to ask you to go into a house that is not what my darling deserves and is used to, and that will cause her some inconveniences. About all I see left is the Duick house or the Verner house, neither of which appeals to me hardly at all.

I am still counting on your coming in Sunday and am going to urge you to do so as I want to talk to you about the house question and I feel like we must decide it right away or we may be entirely "up in the air."

From the North we have on at present, I make a motion we take a trip to Galveston or some-
