instance the food fell outside the lines. This led indirectly to the written demand for surrender from Lieut. Heinrich Prinz. But before going into that it should be explained that, in order to mark his position for the American aviators, Major Whittlesey had placed in position the white cloth panels employed in the Army for such a purpose. These later were to play a part in the drama.

It was tantalizing to the suffering, hungry men to see the precious food meant for them falling outside their position. Nine men, without asking permission, went out into No Man's Land to search for some of the fallen parcels. They paid a heavy penalty. Five were killed, four captured. Among the latter was Private Growell R. Hollingshead. These men fell into the hands of the German forces commanded by Lieutenant Prinz. The latter already knew by observation and reconnaissance what extremities the Americans were in. With some difficulty he com-

The note was couched in polite terms, praised the bravery of the Americans, and wound up with a demand for surrender in the name of humanity.

We now approach the moment when in the apocryphal histories of the event Whittlesey cried: "Go to Hell." That would have been what our French allies call a beau geste and certainly no American soldier, or civilian, would condemn the major had he indulged in some profanity at the moment. Fortunately, we have the major's own words for what actually occurred. Writing in his official Operations Report he says: "At 4 p. m. a private from H Company reported that he had left without permission in the morning with eight others. They encountered a German outpost. Five of the nine were killed, the rest were captured. This man was given by the Germans a demand for our surrender, a copy of which is hereto attached. He was then blindfolded and returned to our lines. NO REPLY TO THE DEMAND TO SURRENDER SEEMED NECESSARY."

Undramatic you will say, but then those of you who were in it know the United States Army doesn't go in for drama. But, to continue in the language of the stage, there is restrained acting that our better critics deem superior to the fustian and claptrap which so wins the gallery. That was the school of Whittlesey. In the message sent to him by the German officer he had been asked to display a white flag if he meant to surrender. Whittlesey's answer to that was an order to take up the white cloth panels that marked his position to his own airplanes. In doing that he cut his last connecting link with the American army, knowing when he did it that this action might delay, and perhaps prevent, his rescue.

The Demand for Surrender

TO the Commanding Officer—Infantry, 77th Division.

"Sir:—The bearer of this present, Private, has been taken prisoner by us. He refused to give the German Intelligence Officer any answer to his questions, and is quite an honorable fellow, doing honor to his Fatherland in the strictest sense of the word.

"He has been charged against his will, believing that he is doing wrong to his country to carry forward this present letter to the officer in charge of the battalion of the 77th Division, with the purpose to recommend this commander to surrender with his forces, as it would be quite useless to resist any more, in view of the present conditions.

"The suffering of your wounded men can be heard over here in the German lines, and we are appealing to your humane sentiments to stop. A white flag shown by one of your men will tell us that you agree with these conditions. Please treat Private..... as an honorable man. He is quite a soldier. We envy you.

The German Commanding Officer."

The Fight of the Lost Battalion

Back of Florent, in the Argonne Forest,
Were gathered a handful of men,
Waiting the word to "go in" again;
To come out—God alone knew when,

East met West in those few short hours,
And were drawn together as one,
As brother to brother, and man to man,
They met to suppress the Hun.

And each of them were thinking thots,
That come to but very few men,
For on the 'morrow they'd go "Over the Top,"
Some never to come back again.

The air and trees were full of sounds,
As we started "in" that night,
You could hear the dull thud of feet on the ground,
As we went marching towards the fight.

To an open space in the road we came,
And God! what a sight to see;—
The skyline was one red flame,
'Twas our barrage for Democracy.

Sh-h! Hush! Make no noise,
As we're "Going In" real soon,
And you could almost hear the heartbeats,
As we crept in platoon by platoon.

Soon we were in our places,
And we breathed a silent prayer,
As we waited, waited and waited—
Through an endless night "Up There."

At eleven P. M. on that eventful night,
Our barrage opened up with a flare;
The earth it trembled and shook in fright,
And death just leaped through the air.

God! how the minutes dragged,
You'd think each one was a day,
As we lay there waiting in the cold,
For "Zero Hour" and break of day.

Finally five-thirty, the "Zero Hour" came,
And the word passed down the line,
Go "Over the Top," and "Play the Game,"
And break their damn "Kremhilde lines."

"Rhymes
of a
Lost Battalion
Doughboy"

What did we find when finally "On Top"
In that waste called "No Man's Land"?
An ocean of wire in the mist and the fog,
Placed there by the devil's hand.

All day long we pushed them back,
By night we'd their second line trench,
Then we "dug in," and waited for him,
By morn, with the rain we were drenched.

The men were gaunt with hunger,
For what food we had was gone,
And there was the "Boche" ahead of us,
But we pushed on, and on and on!

Were you ever out on the battlefields,
With the dead just stacked all around,
The earth in a tremble from fear and fright,
Of the blood on its sacred ground?

Lay wounded, and moaning in pain,
In your heart a gnawing emptiness—
Was that costly price worth the gain?

Well, for three days we went, till our strength was spent,
'Midst sights too terrible to tell,
By the time we landed in a trap that night,
I can tell you, we'd all seen hell.

Exhausted from fighting and dead for sleep,
We dug ourselves in for the night;
And as we lay there 'neath the shell-split air,
We felt 'twas the end of our fight.

At break of dawn the Boche closed in,
We met him face to face—
And many there were who fell that day,
But night found us still in our place.

*"Rhymes
of a
Lost Battalion

For three long days we fought in that trap,
In mud clear up to our knees,
Sleepless, hungry, dying from thirst,
'Neath those splintered Argonne trees.

All hopes gone, our hearts in despair,
When a whisper came down the line,
At last the longed-for relief had arrived,
God knows it came just in time.

We went at the food like a pack of wolves,
That had starved the whole winter through,
And between the munching of bites you'd hear
Mumbled prayers, and curses, too.

No one could picture, try as they might,
The horror and hell of it all,
Our company lost ninety men before night,
It seemed to matter as nothing at all.

And we crushed the best they had,
We gained our objective, were trapped again,
Then we went mad—fighting mad.

On the side of a cliff two hundred feet high,
We dug in like so many moles,
And death was the penalty that you paid,
Should you stick your head from those holes.

Did you ever lay out in the cold all night,
When the frost just creeps through the air,
When death and misery stalks the night,
Like a giant bat of despair?

If you have, perhaps you can sense,
Of the things I'm trying to tell,
And why every man who came out alive,
Could say that he'd lived through hell.

"Rhymes
of a
Lost Battalion
Doughboy"

Fighting all day, holding out by pure grit,
And fighting at night by the flare,
The suffering we bore can never be told,
Of those six days and nights spent there.

Death thinned our ranks, took tenfold her toll,
Of our buddies, your brothers and sons,
But before they went, tho their strength was spent,
They took their share of Huns.

Relief came at last as it always does,
When you're backed by red-blooded men,
But we were so weak, so many were gone,
Nothing mattered at all by then.

We stumbled out more dead than alive,
To food, shelter and rest,
While tender hands cared for those,
Who had passed to eternal rest.

Countless questions you will ask,
About that terrible war,

And came out with but forty and four."

At the close of a spring day in Sable,
I sat in my room alone,
The sun was slowly sinking
And my thots turned back to home.

Thots of my dear old mother,
And how much was hers to bear;
Then in fancy I could see her
In the old familiar chair.

Always thinking of me,
And always praying, too;
Slowly, the truth dawned on me,
Of how much she'd been thru.

Of the long, endless nights of waiting,
And those anxious days of pain;
Wishing, hoping, praying,
That I might return again.

The Flare!

You who know electric lights,
In cities grand and fair,
Have never felt the fear of night,
Unless you've seen the Flare!

You're all secure altho obscure,
And will never know the fright,
That can be brought upon you,
By the Flare when it's a-light.

Your heart is all a-jump
And your nerves are all a-chill,
When you start to go a-raidin',
On a night that's dark and still.

You daren't make a whisper,
And you daren't make a sound,
As you go a-sneakin', creepin',
O'er the cold wet ground.

In "No Man's Land" o'er there,
The thing you're most a-feared of,
Is Jerries' blue-white Flare!

For when he shoots the star-shells,
Into the dark drear night,
You're a mark for sniper's shooting,
And you're filled with fear and fright.

But just you lay stock-still,
As tho you're almost dead,
And he's apt to pass you up,
For some limb or tree instead.

Then you'll see him start a-shootin',
Rockets green and red,
They're his artillery signals,
For his guns which must be fed.

*"Rhymes

You break into a cold wet sweat,
As you cut your way thru wire,
You want to even up a score,
And your heart is all a-fire.

So thru the night that's sometime dim,
And sometime lit by flare,
You crawl and creep as thru an age,
An' softly swear and swear!

And just as dawn is breaking,
In a fever tinted light,
You slowly come a-creepin' in,
With two you got that night.

You're bewildered and bemuddled,
To know that you learned out there,
That the thing that put fear into you,
Was the light of a blue-white Flare.

My Pals are all around me,
It seems like a horrible dream,
But there goes my "Buddie" damn bad hit,
And I go mad when I hear his scream.

My blood boils up in red, red rage,
And I lose the last of my will;
I'm turned to beast and mad man,
And my cry is to kill—to kill!

I rage and mutter all the night,
And wait for the break of day;
For my mind is mad with that one thot,
They must re-pay!—re-pay!

You're gone, so why should I lie,
And say that life's worth while,
When gladly I'd join you where you are,
Just to see once again your smile.

But, Pal, it can never be done,
So may you rest in peace o'er here,

Treasures

Treasures in bits of papers,
Treasures in mines of gold,
Treasures in age seared relics,
And in paintings worn and old.

Each to his way of thinking,
Has a treasure in his grasp,
Mine came from the heart of a rough-neck,
And lay in a simple hand-clasp.

'Twas in the lines in the heat of a fight,
And the devil was our host,
He showed us all his tricks and stunts,
As we lay in a stranded outpost.

Without water, food or shelter,
We had lain there for days,
Exhausted and slowly dying,
And our eyes were beginning to glaze.

Our instructions were to hold that post,
Against any odds that might come,
And we were sticking it out alone,

Old Detail Army

Doggone this Detail Army,
Is all I've got to say,
Ever since the Armistice,
We've been laboring night and day.

When the fighting was all over,
And we thot the job was done,
They handed us a shovel,
And took away our gun.

The French Folks only laughed at us,
(They did it on the sly),
When our bold and noble white-winged squad
Went sadly marching by.

I never thot that I would be,
A street-cleaner brave and bold,
Until I started cleaning up France,
In the sleet, the rain and the cold.

From K. P. to loading box cars,
They worked you night and day,
So doggone this "Old Detail Army,"

While the "cootie" rigged his digger

At the front the Majors had 'em,
Every Captain raised his share;
But there sure was Hell a-poppin'

The Bandolier

Perhaps in the mud you've seen me laying,
Or perhaps in the Q. M. den;
But still and all I'm one of you,
No matter where or when.

I fill a want that is a need,
As across your shoulder I'm slung,
And done my bit as well perhaps,
As some highly touted gun.

Just a bit of woven cloth,
Thrown slightly about,
But when in the midst of a tough hot fight,
Pray tell, for whom did you shout?

I'm the one for whom you cried,
And gladly did I respond,
I knew your hour of need would come,
That's why I was easily found.

I flung myself around your neck,
When you started in the fight,
Stop a moment and reflect,
You'll see where I was right.

Just a lowly bit of patch cloth,
Humble carrier of the shell,
I served my purpose just as true,
As you who did so well.

So if again some day we meet,
Don't start and cuss and jeer,
Just remember I'm your "right hand bower,"
Your humble bandolier.

The bandolier was used as a carrier of our extra rifle ammunition, and they would hold 60 shells each. When going in the lines we would oftentimes pack from four to six of these slung across our shoulder, and we would heartily tell the world that they were heavy, etc., but it wasn't long before we were more than willing to pack them as we soon learned that in time of need they were our one best bet.

Thots!

Oh! to get away from it all,
Those war-ridden thots, that come,
To blind forever those memories,
And the sound of the bullets' hum.

To live once more, as I did before,
In peace and quiet and rest;
To just forget for a little while,
That it took from my life the best.

At night, when all is quiet,
And I'm lying alone in bed,
There comes a vision of battlefields,
The fight, the maimed and the dead.

Will I never forget that hell "Over There,"
And the tales the battlefields tell,
Of the price my "Buddies" paid with "their all,"
And the place in which they fell?

And seems like they're calling to me.

I can hear the big 'uns screech and scream,
As they go flying o'er my head,
They seem to say, both night and day,
"Remember the dead—the dead."

And sometimes I think, as I sit alone,
Perhaps it might have been best,
If I too, had paid that great price,
And were out there now with the rest.

Oh! those war cursed thots,
That haunt me night and day;
Dear God, be merciful,
And take them forever away.

Our Chaplain

He came and went amongst our midst,
With never a sign of a gun,
His mind unseared or war-crazed,
With thots of taming the Hun.

His mission was one of kindness,
And no matter what his creed,
You'd always find him near us,
Whene'er we were in need.

I've seen him go amongst the maimed,
To bind and dress their wounds,
Then pray o'er loved ones laid to rest,
While shells played shrieking tunes.

When "Going In," to do our spell,
He'd grasp us by the hand,
And tell us in this simple way,
That God did understand.

You proved yourselves God's noblemen,
And played the game clear thru;
Where'er your station is today,
My hat is off to you.

Is worthy of a philosopher's study,
No matter whether man or lad,
That's the one greeting we all had.

From as small a thing, as—"Gimme a light,"
To laying down his life in a fight,
There was no color, nor was there creed,
Whenever a "Buddy" was in need.

A man may have been of the Gospel bred,
Or so low, that even his name was dead,
Yet when he grasped a "Buddy's" hand,

That Hike

Hey, Fellows!—
Remember the time
The Kaiz got wise,
And took to the Rhine?

Well, we were at Raucort,
Waitin' returns,
When on November eleventh
The war adjourns.

So gladly we mounted
Our packs on our back,
With a song in our hearts,
We started back.

Only to be stopped
At Ouches next day,
And sent up to Mouzon,
Which was the other way.

We did five days' "Guard,"
In the cold up there,
We'll never forget our billet,
That gray church in the square.

*"Rhymes
of a
Lost Battalion
Doughboy"*

Then came a rush order,
"Roll packs right away,"
As we'd parade in New York
On Christmas day.

So for six days we hiked,
'Till we came to Floren',
I guess you remember—
We were damn near all in.

But we were headed home,
So didn't care a rap,
As we'd been to the Front,
And were used to that.

But when they deloused us,
Oh, boy! How we swore—
For they'd hiked us to Les Isalets,
Which was twelve kilos or more.

Then early and bright
The very next day,
We continued "That Hike,"
"On to Broadway."

Nine more weary days,
We hiked up and down hills,
Until finally we landed
In Pointlville.

Why grumble now—
You know it's all over,
No doubt you're back home
In the land of clover.

But if ever you think
Things are breaking tough,
Just remember "THAT HIKE"—
"THAT'S ENOUGH."

"THAT HIKE," is a true and accurate description of a forced march made by the entire 77th Division at the close of the war. We covered a distance of about 155 miles on that hike and it took us fifteen days in all. While our kitchens followed us they had practically no food at all, and for Thanksgiving breakfast they handed us out from four to five stewed prunes each, and a hard luck story, and we hiked twelve miles that day in the rain.

"Rhymes

It's the coming back, I hate worst of all,
It grates on my nerves worse than gall,
A wreck, they'll say, when I land today,
And with sighs of pity they'll turn away.

With empty sleeve and face a mess,
I'm no more than half a man, I guess,
And it's tearing my heart slowly apart,
And I wonder how I'll make a new start.

I left these shores not so long ago,
As fit as any man who'd go,
I held my head high as could be,
And was proud to fight for our Liberty.

For it isn't so hard to go in and fight,
When you know your cause is more than right,
And it isn't so hard for men to die,
The hardest of all is to hear folks sigh.

So help me forget, don't sympathize,
I can't get cheery on long drawn sighs,
Just take and shake my one good hand,
Then I'll know you understand.

Homeward Bound

As I stand on this transport here by the rail,
Watching her plow thru the foam;
There's just one thing I can think about,
And that is, we're "Going Home."

Many is the time while at the front,
In some battle of raging hell;
I'd lift my voice to the One above,
That He guide me home safe and well.

All the sweetness and joys of life,
Are embodied in these two words,
"Homeward Bound," my, don't they sound nice;
When your heart's just as light as a bird's?

And I, for one, as I stand here alone,
Thank my Maker above,
That I'm permitted to be "Homeward Bound,"
To the ones I so dearly love.

'Twas Uncle Sammy's doughboys
That put the kibosh on the Hun;
Now we're waiting for "That Transport"
And we'll take her on the run.

Oh, why do you wait, Mr. Baker?
Just send us a ship or a raft;
For the U. S. A. and our freedom,
We'd sail on any old craft.

At first we were going home Christmas,
And then on New Year's Day;
But now it's the fifteenth of April,
Unless they change it to May.

Now General Pershing's motto
Is a good one, we all know;
"Let's get where we're going today, boys,"
And you bet, we're ready to go.

The Statue of Liberty beckons
To her soldiers across the sea;
"Let's go!" and get where we're going,
Back home, to the land of the free.

The Price

Now listen here, old Pal of mine,
I've fought from the Vesle clear up to the Rhine,
At Chateau-Thierry and in the Argonne Wood,
I did my bit as best I could.

Why, I've cut my way through an ocean of wire,
And stood the test when under fire,
I've lain in the cold and the rain all night,
Fought like hell for what I thot was right.

I've marched to the band and felt mighty proud,
Because I was one of that fighting crowd,
Now I'm back in this land of ours,
And will be in my civies in a few short hours.

But, somehow or other it all seems bare,
And I feel like hell when people stare,
For some are thinking of loved ones lost,
And others of how much we're going to cost.

And that's the bunch I'm sore about,
The patriot who was so willing to shout,
Then turn us out when we came home,
On two months' pay in the world to roam.

The Returns

"Rhymes

Lost Battalion
Doughboy"

Buddy of mine, you're wrong, all wrong,
You'll soon again be one of the throng,
Not as you were when you went away,
But a proved man now, the man of the day.

Why, boy, just think of what you've been thru,
And the glory of knowin' that you've been true,
Think of the "Buddies" whom you gave a hand,
Why, you gained the love of your fellow man.

Think of the knowledge you did gain,
When you pushed clear thru to Alsace-Lorraine,
Think for a moment of some homely French folk,

That you helped release from the Hun's terrible yoke.

Why, they expressed to you in their attitude,
An ocean of love and real gratitude,
And in one small second of that war,
You've lived a thousand lives or more.

Tho you may not have your share of gold,
What you learned "Up There" is wealth untold;
And the big thing you gained from what you've been thru;

Is that high ideal of being true.

Phantoms

From St. Mihiel to the Vesle,
With the night wind's sorrowful wail,
Goes a sound that's understood,
"Gather here in Argonne Wood."

Thru the night winds wet and dreary,
The word goes on to Chateau-Thierry,
Ghostly Phantoms hear the call,
Then gather those who gave their "all."

Phantom heroes gather there,
In shell-torn land, so bleak and bare,
And there beneath the sighing tree,
They are judging you and me.

By the flitting shadow light,
By the mystic shades of night,
In the one-time shell-split air,
Phantom Souls are judging there,

So listen well unto that call
Of Phantom souls who gave their all,
And may you never droop your head,
In answer to our own—our dead.

"History and Rhymes

Lost Battalion"

Dear Reader:

I wish to thank you for purchasing this copy of the "History and Rhymes of the Lost Battalion", and sincerely trust that you have enjoyed it from cover to cover.

Ofttimes I wonder "What are the thoughts of some of my readers?" after reading the simple little thoughts contained in my rhymes concerning that which is expected to be the unusual, but so often is the commonplace.

From time to time I receive many friendly letters from my readers, and many kind words have been spoken for my first efforts, and frankly, it is gratifying to have these friends. In all sincerity, I hope to have you as that sort of a friend.

Should you have enjoyed the book, pass the good word amongst your friends, and if they or you should desire additional copies that are not handled by your dealer or my representative, write me direct to the address above, and copies will be mailed to you at the same cost as your original copy.

Again thanking you, I remain

Most sincerely yours,

"Buck Private" McCollum

precede the number to be sent, and the numerals followed by "Interval" if letters are to follow.

In the U. S. Navy System, the numerals of the Semaphore are spelled out, therefore no auxiliary meanings are required.

To call a station, execute "Attention" followed by the call-letter of station called, repeat until answered by "Attention," both stations then execute "Interval," after which the message is sent.

"Negative," "Affirmative," or "Interrogatory" followed by "Interval," conveys a relative meaning to the signal that follows.

The receiver should acknowledge "Attention," "Interrogatory," etc., whenever observed, and also at end of message when it is understood.

Hints for Executing the Semaphore Alphabet:

(A to G: Complete series, one arm at "Interval.")

P, Q, R, S: Right arm horizontal, left arm progresses downward.

H, I, O: Left arm crosses the body.

W, X, Z: Right arm crosses the body.

Opposite letters: A & G, B & F, C & E, H & Z, I & X, J & P, K & V, O & W, M & S, and Q & Y.

It will also facilitate the learning of letters and signs in the Semaphore System, if memorized in groups as follows:

1. A, B, C, D, E, F, G, — Interval
2. L, U, R, N, — Attention
3. H, I, O, — Chop-chop
4. K, L, M, N, — W, X, Z
5. P, Q, R, S, — J, V
6. K, P, T, — Y, Numerals

ARDOIS SYSTEM

The Ardois System, a display of four lights, is based upon the "Dot" and "Dash" Code. A red light represents the "Dot" and a white light the "Dash." To illustrate: The letter B would show White-Red-Red-Red for the Dash-Dot-Dot-Dot. The lights are read from the top downward.

Interval • - • -	Double Interval (twice)	Triple Interval (3 times)
---------------------	----------------------------	------------------------------

THE FLASHING LIGHT AND SOUND SYSTEMS

The International Morse Code is used in these systems, including the Conventional Signs of the "Wig Wag."

A short flash or blast signifies "Dot," a longer flash or blast "Dash," and a long, steady display or blast, "Interval."

Double Interval, • • • • •

Triple Interval • - - - -

"When using a bell, one stroke would represent the "Dot," two strokes the "Dash," and three strokes "Interval" (•••••)

Double Interval • • • • •

Triple Interval • • • • •

In the U. S. Army, and also for spelled-out messages in the Navy, a space is used for "Interval" in the Flash and Sound systems.

POCKET SIGNAL DISK

FOR
INSTRUCTION AND PRACTICE

INTERNATIONAL MORSE AND
SEMAPHORE CODES

By CAPTAIN L. A. CLAPP, U. S. M. C.

IN ACCORDANCE WITH

U. S. Army and Navy Systems

1917

MANUFACTURED EXCLUSIVELY
BY THE

STANDARD NOVELTY CO.
MELROSE, MASS., U. S. A.

INSTRUCTIONS

In the use of the Pocket Signal Disk, the beginner should first study the selected code carefully. Then, for a test, turn the disc corresponding to the code and call the signals as they appear in the opening.

By continuing this practice for a short time daily, the code is soon learned, and a practical execution of the signals easily accomplished.

To signal with the hand-flags, torch or lantern, face squarely toward the station to be signaled, execute every motion distinctly, and make a slight pause after each letter.

The principal Systems now in general use, based upon the Semaphore and International Morse Codes, are as follows:

WIG-WAG SYSTEM

This system is applicable for signaling with the hand-flag, torch, lantern, or search-light, using the "International Morse Code."

The first position and motions of the "Wig-Wag" together with the official Code, are plainly illustrated on the disk.

When signaling with a torch or lantern, a foot-light should be set, to plainly mark the motions to the right or left.

To call a station, execute its call-letter followed occasionally by the call-letter of your own station, until acknowledged.

If the call-letter is unknown, signal "A" at intervals and occasionally repeat the call letter of your own station, until acknowledged.

When acknowledging a call-signal, execute "R" Interval, followed by the call-letter of your own station.

The Conventional Signals of the Wig-Wag System are as follows:

End of word	Interval (Front)
End of sentence	Double Interval
End of message	Triple Interval
Signal separating preamble from address; address from text; text from signature	-----
Acknowledgement	--- (R)
Error (eight dots)
Interrogatory	----
Repeat after (word)	Interrogatory, A (word)
Repeat last word	Interrogatory, twice
Repeat last message	Interrogatory, 3 times
Send faster	Q R Q
Send slower	Q R S
Cease sending	Q R T
Wait a moment
Execute	IX IX
Move to your right	M R
Move to your left	M L
Move up	M U
Move down	M D
Finished (end of work)	-----

ADDITIONAL SYMBOLS

Cornet - - - -	Signals follow -----
Letters follow - - - -	Code Interval -----

SECONDARY MEANINGS

Used only in flag hoists. Ardois, Semaphore and Very; or in transmitting Navy-flag code by other systems. (The use of Navy-flag code is indicated by "Signals follow") (-----)

Negative (K) ---	Interrogatory (O) ---
Preparatory (L) ----	Affirmative (P) ----
Annuling (N) --

SEMAPHORE SYSTEM

On one side of the disk is designed a most practical method for individual instruction in the Semaphore Code.

Complete in itself, the miniature men are made to represent the letters and symbols as they are actually seen when "receiving."

In the Navy System two extra Symbols are added to the Semaphore, namely: "Letters follow" (executed the opposite of "T") and "Signals follow," (executed the opposite of "L")

By substituting the "Interval" as executed in this system, the conventional signals of the Wig Wag are used with the following exceptions:

End of word	Interval (Flags crossed)
End of sentence	Two "Chop-Chop" signals (Double Interval)
End of message	Three "Chop-Chop" signals and withdrawing flags (Triple Interval)
Error	"A" (Arms agitated)
Interrogatory	"O" (Arms agitated)
Signal separating preamble from address; address from text; text from signature	Double interval (signature also preceded by "Sig. Interval.")
Wait a moment	(None)
Finished (end of work)	(None)

In the U. S. Army System, the numerals of the Semaphore code are designated by the first ten letters of the alphabet, as illustrated on the face of the disk.

The Symbol for numerals should always
