A Villager at a Movie

After a long journey on his donkey, a villager arrived at the city of Kayseri. This was his first visit to a city, and he was somewhat bewildered by the crowds of people and the colorful shops along the main streets. He was so confused by all of this that he lost track of his donkey. When he realized that the animal was no longer with him, he hunted and hunted for it in all of the nearby streets. Not wishing to spoil his first trip to a city by further searching, he decided to enjoy himself and somehow find the donkey later

He soon came to a theatre where a film was being shown. He had never seen a motion picture before this time, and he was entirely captivated by the action on the screen. In one romantic scene a male character said to his girlfriend, "Look into my eyes, my dear, and tell me what you see."

"My darling, I can see the whole world in your eyes," said the girl

When the villager heard that, he stood up and called out, "Have you seen my donkey?"
