

Judge W P McLean: Commander?

The undersigned committee appointed to present to this camp memorial resolutions on the demise of our late comrade J.Y. Hogsett, respectfully report:

That his death occurred at his residence, 414 West 4th street, Fort Worth, on the 12th day of September 1909, just entering the 67th year of his age.

From the archives of the camp we gather a brief of his service as a Confederate soldier. He was born in Anderson county East Tennessee July 22nd 1843 and enlisted at San Antonio in October 1861 in the fifth Texas cavalry Col Tom Greene and as a part of the Arizona brigade first under Gen Sibley was first under fire at the battle of Valverde, New Mexico, where he was wounded and shortly after - in March 1862 - was captured and remained a prisoner till the spring of 1863. He was in the Louisiana campaign of 1863-4 under Gen Tom Greene. Was in the engagement at Bayou Teche, near Berwick's Bay, next was in the battle of Donaldsonville where he was again wounded: Was in the campaign of 1864 known as Banks Red River campaign and was again wounded at the battle of Yellow Bayou.

Thus with a record among the oldest Confederate soldiers in point of service he was among the youngest in point of age. His many wounds show a gallantry in action equal to the most daring.

His record as a civilian of more than forty years during his residence here in Fort Worth equals in activity and fidelity to duty that of his career as a Confederate soldier. As a lawyer we find him drawing the first charter of the city in 1873 which stood the test of the struggling hamlet and started it on its way to grow into prominence as one of the leading cities of the South west. With rare foresight as one of the law firm of Hanna and Hogsett, he aided in the compilation of an abstract of titles to lands in the county, which were the only land marks left after the destruction of the records in 1876. For eight years this firm lead the bar as land lawyers with uninterrupted success. Then followed the firms of Hogsett and Greene, and Hogsett, Green and Booty, and Hogsett and Orrick, in succession, which left their impress for honorable and distinguished service. Being called as a representative of Tarrant county in the legislative halls of the state his ability for constructive legislation is left plainly marked on our statute books.

He found time in the midst of an active law practice to aid in organizing the Traders National Bank and which yet survives him on the solid foundation laid by him and his associates. Other enterprises grew out of his clear vision of successful financiering, some of this city others in adjoining areas, which still exist as monuments to his wisdom and integrity. He was the soul of honor and scorned the subterfuges of weak characters. Among his last acts of supplying the needs of local wants was in the establishment of a home life Insurance company which leaves prospering equal to his many other enterprises, that have transformed a village into a city.

He was an ideal husband, a devoted father and a public spirited citizen, whom we all delighted to honor.

Therefore be it resolved:

That while it is natural to die as to be born, yet we have here sustained a loss in his passing that we can not repair and we deeply deplore his leaving us and here tender to his widow surviving him and his children our most sincere sympathies and condolence.

The undersigned committee appointed to prepare and to this camp memorial resolutions on the demise of our late comrade J. Y. Hoge, respectfully report:

That his death occurred at his residence, 414 West 4th Street, York, Pa., on the 18th day of September 1903, just entering the 67th year of his age.

From the archives of the camp we gather a brief of his service as a Confederate soldier. He was born in Anderson county East Tennessee July 22nd 1843 and enlisted at San Antonio in October 1861 in the 5th Texas Cavalry. He was first under part of the Arizona brigade first under Gen. Shelby, was first under fire at the battle of Valverde, New Mexico, where he was wounded and shortly after in March 1862 was captured and remained a prisoner until the spring of 1863. He was in the Louisiana campaign of 1863-4 under Gen. Beauregard. He was in the engagement at Bayou Teche, near Bayou Lafourche, next was in the battle of Donaldsonville, where he was again wounded. He was in the campaign of 1864 known as the Red River campaign and was again wounded at the battle of Yellow Bayou.

Thus with a record among the oldest Confederate soldiers in point of service he was among the young in point of age. His many wounds show a gallant in action equal to the most daring.

His record as a civilian of more than forty years turning his residence here in York, Pa., equals in activity and industry to that of his career as a Confederate soldier. As a lawyer we find his driving the first case of the city in 1873 which stood the test of the Supreme Court and started it on its way to grow into prominence as one of the leading cases of the South West. With rare foresight as one of the law firm of Hume and Hoge, he aided in the completion of an abstract of titles to lands in the county, which were the only land marks left after the destruction of the records in 1876. For eight years this firm led the bar as land lawyers with untiring success. When followed the firm of Hoge and Greene, and Hoge, Greene and Hoge, and Hoge, Greene and Hoge, in succession which left their impress for honorable and distinguished service. When called as a representative of the county in the legislative halls of the state his ability for constructive legislation is left plainly marked on our statute books.

He found time in the midst of an active law practice to add to the literature of the Treasures National Bank and which yet survives on the solid foundation laid by him and his associates. Other enterprises grew out of his clear vision of successful enterprises, some of this city others in adjoining areas, which still exist as monuments to his wisdom and industry. He was the soul of honor and adorned the enterprises of weak characters. Among his last acts of amplifying the needs of local wants was in the establishment of a home life insurance company which leaves progressing equal to his many other enterprises, that have transformed a village into a city.

He was an ideal husband, a devoted father and a public spirited citizen whom we all delighted to honor.

Therefore be it resolved: That while it is natural to die as to be born yet we have great regrets in his passing that we can not regret and we deeply deplore his leaving us and more tender to his widow surviving him and his children our most sincere sympathies and condolences.
