Here's Eso Naranche, 210-pounder playing halfback for Montana and hailing from Butte, Mont., where they grow them big, rugged and fast. This Naranche made a name for himself on the Pacific Coast because of his uncanny ability to rip opposing lines to shreds. He does the bulk of hard plunging for Montana. He was twice an All-State for Butte before he took to lugging the ball for the Grizzlies. Watch this mighty man mountain take his cracks and plow for yardage against Texas Tech's redoubtable front wall. He has starred in each of Montana's seven games this season.

A Triple Threat Ace

Montana's powerful Frank Nugent can really punt but the crowd can't appreciate him until it has seen him pass, run and back-up a line. Nugent will be in Montana's backfield today, primed to deal misery to the Red Raiders.

Montana's 1939 Record

Montana 9, Portland U. 0.

Montana 7, Frisco U. 12.

Montana 6, Montana St. 0.

Montana 6, U.C.L.A. 20.

Montana 13, Idaho U. 0.

Montana 0, Washington U. 9.

Montana 0, Gonzaga 23.

Won 3, Lost 4.

Scored 41 points.

Opponents scored 64 points.

A Bit o'Dope

Montana will be working for a second victory over Texas Tech today when the Grizzlies meet the razzle dazzlers on Tech field to break the one game each score. Coach Doug Fessenden's Grizzly crew took the tough Red Raiders into camp, 13 to 7, in Lubbock two years ago, a defeat that Coach Cawthon's men did not forget. Last year the Raiders invaded Missoula and carried off a 19 to 13 victory despite a brilliant second half rally on the part on Montana.

Both have been in-and-out teams this season. Motana has won three and lost four. Texas Tech has won three, lost five and tied one.

Montana is on its "finis trip." The Grizzlies play Texas Tech here today and then hop over to Tucson for the Arizona Wildcat battle on Thursday, November 30th, just four days after they play the Red Raiders. Montana defeated Arizona last season. After today's game the Red Raiders go to New Orleans to close their season against Loyola on Friday, December 1st.

Apple Tosser

Football fans of Texas have seen some fine passers in their time, but Coach Doug Fessenden of Montana thinks they haven't seen anything until they see "Red" Bryan of Montana toss the "apple" to his Grizzly receivers. Bryan boasts a remarkable high average of pass completions this season. He is the Bob Feller of the Pacific Coast when it comes to throwing "strikes" to his receivers.

Montana's Midget

Montana's midget, Butch Hudacek, 150-pound halfback who can really ramble in the wide-open spaces. If Texas Tech's defense isn't on the alert he will ramble all over the State of Texas. He is the Jack Crain of Montana's offense and has reeled off several long touchdown runs this season. Montana has been through seven tough games and Butch's light is still shining.

Coach Fessenden Talks

"Texas Tech uses the same system as we have been playing against in our last two games. Basically Gonzaga's and Washington's plays are the same as Texas Tech's and there is no use saying we are not prepared for the Red Raiders.

"The Grizzlies have spent days looking at the motion pictures of last year's Texas Tech game which we lost. We believe we know what to expect of the big South Plains machine.

"This year I am employing an attack that is like Texas Tech's in that we use a lot of passing, laterals and quick running plays.

"The Red Raiders are much heavier in the line and the only way for my team to overcome this weight advantage is for the Grizzly line to out-charge and out-fight the Raiders. That is a big assignment for my boys. Through-out this week my line has been doing a lot of defensive and offensive charging.

"Eso Naranche, Grizzly 218-pound full-back, and Red Bryan, our passing halfback, are both in first class condition for the first time since the UCLA game early in the season. Much of our hope for a victory today over your big and powerful Red Raiders must rest on the willing and trying shoulders of Naranche and Bryan, two sophomores who have come through for me this season. But win or lose, I'll guarantee you a ball game today simply because we're shooting both guns and taking dead aim on the Red Raiders with each touchdown shot.

Did you know that . . .

. . . the average football player practices over 200 hours each season in order to actually play only 4 or 5 hours in official football games . . . while in training for one season football players of America do without enough sweets to take care of approximately 10 battalions (10,000 soldiers) for a period of at least 3 months . . . They spend enough energy in one year's time doing vicious blocking, deadly tackling, clipping, roughing, running, "fighting," etc., to get the equivalent of 3 or 4 European wars out of their system . . . it's a tough life and old "SOCKO" (The All-American Toro, pictured above) is certainly glad that this is the last game so he can break training in the good old American fashion.

Moral Support

Co-Captain Bob Thornally of Montana who has contributed his share of the captain's job this season from the bench because of an injured neck, received in the University of San Francisco game. Thornally may not get into action today against the Red Raiders but he is on the trip and will give his mates moral support as they strive for their fourth win of the season. When in condition, Thornally is one of the better centers on the Pacific Slope.

Loyola of New Orleans Next

After today's game against the university of Montana the Texas Tech Red Raiders will rest a few days and then head toward their final game of the 1939 campaign . . . a combat against Loyola of the South at New Orleans on Friday, December 1st.

Loyola's 1939 schedule includes teams from six different states this season, including:

Catholic University, District of Columbia.
Birmingham-Southern, Alabama.
Louisiana State University, Louisiana.
Texas Tech, Texas.
Southwestern, Tennessee.
Mississippi College, Mississippi.

Other teams on Loyola's schedule this season include Louisiana College of New Orleans, Creighton University, Southwestern Louisiana Institute and Spring Hill College of New Orleans.

The Loyola Wolfpack has won four games this season. The record follows:

Loyola 7, Louisiana College 0.
Loyola 7, Birmingham-Southern 6.
Loyola 32, Mississippi College 0.
Loyola 0, Louisiana State 20.
Loyola 13, Creighton 21.
Loyola 0, Southwestern (Tex) 20.
Loyola 20, Southwestern (La) 13.
Loyola 0, Catholic U 7.

The Loyola Wolfpack of the South is looking forward with apprehension toward next week's Texas Tech game . . . The Wolfpack is determined to avenge last season's 50 to 0 defeat plastered on by Texas Tech's Cotton Bowl-bound team.

A special train will convey the Texas Tech band and fans to New Orleans for the game. Watch your local newspaper for information concerning the big, special train to New Orleans and the Red Raiders' final 1939 game.

Just Ramblin' Around

By BILL PARKER

Four of the Southwest Conference finest football officials will call'em as they see'em in today's Montana and Texas Tech game . . . They are Harry Viner, referee; Cooper Kinney, umpire; Eddie Dyer, head linesman; and Field Scovell, field judge . . . It's the consensus that Viner of Houston is not only one of the best in the Southwest but the entire nation . . . Dyer is a veteran Southwest official and easily one of the best . . . Dyer manages the Houston Buffaloes of the Texas league during baseball season . . . He has been with the St. Louis Cardinal association many years . . . Kinney, also from Houston, has worked in some of the biggest intersectional games in which Southwest Conference teams have played . . . We've known Field Scovell since he played a wicked game of football for North Dallas High and later for Texas A. and M. Aggies . . . It's not our fault if Field turned out to be just another sporting goods salesman . . . Watch these four gentlemen work today's ball game . . . They know what it's all about and how to really officiate.

But leaving the officiating to the officials . . . You know, I wonder why it is that old timers point to such and such eleven as a great team when the records in the gymnasium show the caliber of the opposition can't begin to compare with what the present day Texas Tech Red Raiders play . . . I also wonder why it is that old timers hark back to the days of Joe Blow as a great end, Tommy Scatterbrain as a great field general and Sadie Sandstorm as a great kicker when football has changed for the better or so much that an end today must be able to play a five, six or seven man line; he must be able to crash and take it, yet be agile enough to be a demon on pass receiving; a quarterback must know how and when to shift his offensive to take advantage of either a five, six or seven man line and the main worry of the old time quarterback was a roving center and an occasional back into the flat as major defensive changes of that era.

I always get a laugh when I gather around a gang of old timers who seem to take delight in putting your coaches on the pan for mistakes players make when even with passing concern you could learn the very thing the old timers like to gripe about is definitely something the coaches have slaved and drilled incessantly on for days only to have some youngster fail to carry out what he has been taught days before the game . . . and down to the last man, those old timers made the same mistakes when they were playing . . . but they forget so easily.

But there's one thing I'll just never understand, not even after 21 years of sports writing from here to Berlin, Capetown and back . . . That's why is it that a successful play, in the fans' opinion, is due to the greatness of the players who executed it, rather than the coaches who conceived the play, laid out the blocking assignments and developed the timing and team cohesion that carried it out successfully . . . Why not give the coaches credit for the success of that play, that touchdown, because if it had failed the coaches would have been blamed . . . But that's your football and regardless of whether I can understand it or not, it will go on and on just as it is today . . . but she's a grand game anyway you take it.

Mr. Ralph Trolinger, the very genial traveling cattle car and passenger agent for Santa Fe, wants us to tell you that everything is arranged for that special train to New Orleans to see the Texas Tech and Loyola game on Friday, December 1st . . . Mr. Trolinger, a very bad golfer, said to tell you that the train would leave Lubbock at 2 P.M. Wednesday, November 29th, and that it will arrive (he hopes) in New Orleans at 1:30 P.M. on Thursday, November 30th. The big special will leave New Orleans Saturday night at 10:00 P.M. and arrive in Lubbock (we all hope) at 9:30 P.M. Sunday, December 3rd. The round trip fare will be $15.00, chair cars only . . . But who wants to sleep on a special train?

Since this is the last home game of the 1939 campaign and the last program you'll read here until next season, I'd like to pay this tribute to Coach Peter Willis Cawthon and to Coach Russell "Dutchy" Smith . . . They have coached well . . . I don't matter how many games their team won or lost this season, the fact that Pete Cawthon and "Dutchy" Smith coached their boys to play cleanly, to conduct themselves like true American gentlemen on and off the field is enough . . . There is so very, very much more to coaching a football team than just winning or losing, and you, you and you are certainly aware of the fact that Cawthon and Smith deserve a world of credit for coaching and stamping into their cohorts commendable individuality, highly esteemed traits and habits which will be exceedingly beneficial to the boys long after they have concluded their football at Texas Tech . . . To Cawthon and Smith a coaching job well done.

A Half-Century of Football Achievement

A Tribute to Amos Alonzo Stagg

When a man has contributed fifty years of his life to any profession or project in these fast-moving and turbulent times, the achievement is one worthy of note.

But when that man has given fifty years of an energetic life to the work of building the minds, the bodies and the spirit of American boys as a teacher of intercollegiate football and of all the fine qualities which the sport contributes to American life, then that achievement is truly a unique and valuable one.

That is the record of Amos Alonzo Stagg, formerly of the University of Chicago, now of the College of the Pacific.

For more than four decades, Coach Stagg was the heart and soul and driving force of intercollegiate sports at the University of Chicago. During those years, he not only became the most famous and successful of football coaches but also a national symbol of the most worthwhile things which intercollegiate sports and sportsmanship should represent. That he was a highly successful teacher of football is attested by the fact that the University of Chicago still leads all other Western Conference universities in the number of conference championships won.

That he was even more successful in teaching the traits which football should inculcate is the testimony of the hundreds of men who played football under him, whether in victory or defeat, at the University of Chicago.

In 1931, as his decades of service to the University of Chicago drew to a close, Coach Stagg was the honor guest at a dinner of Yale graduates in Chicago. Mr. Stagg was graduated from Yale in 1888 after a brilliant career as an undergraduate athlete in several sports, during which he won All-American honors at end and pitched Yale to several championships in baseball.

At the Yale Club dinner in Chicago, Prof. William Lyon Phelps declared that "this is a tribute not only to one of Yale's greatest athletes, whose individual record is incomparable, but a tribute to personality, character and influence."

It is for exactly those reasons that the members of the American Football Coaches Association have dedicated their coming meeting at Los Angeles, Calif., on Dec. 28 and 29, to the commemoration of the 50th anniversary of Mr. Stagg's coaching career. Today in his 77th year, he is still a highly successful coach, having turned out winning teams at the College of the Pacific, in Stockton, Calif. since 1935. As recently as a few weeks ago, his College of the Pacific eleven defeated the University of California in one of the season's outstanding achievements. But more important than the fact that he is still a coach of winning teams is the fact that he still embodies the hard-fighting, clean-cut, sportsmanlike qualities which, at its best, intercollegiate football teaches.

And it is for those reasons that America's college football coaches and America's college football enthusiasts from Coast to Coast join as this season comes to a close in hailing this half-century of service to our sport and to the development of a better race of American boys.

Born in West Orange, N. J., on August 16, 1862, Amos Alonzo Stagg entered Yale College in 1884. He was picked by Walter Camp as an All-American end. He pitched Yale to five championships, varsity athletes not then being limited to a certain number of competitive seasons.

In 1890, he went to Springfield College as a faculty member, but the following year he was called to the University of Chicago by President William Rainey Harper as Director of Athletics, with the rank of Associate Professor.

At Chicago, where he interested himself in the teaching of all sports, his football teams were the most successful in the Middle West and his coaching methods the most progressive in the game. He was a pioneer in the development of the shift. He was an early advocate of the forward pass. He developed the "flanker formation," one of the most definite advances in football strategy and a play that is as sound today as it was when he introduced it nearly forty years ago.

In 1931, to commemorate the close of his 40 years at Chicago, Yale sent its varsity eleven west to play Mr. Stagg's team—the tribute of a grateful alma mater to one of her most illustrious sons. After his retirement from the University of Chicago, in 1932, Mr. Stagg spurred the opportunity to rest on his laurels. A new field beckoned at the College of the Pacific. Now in his 77th year, exactly fifty years after he turned out his first football team, he is still the most vigorous, the most progressive, the most inspiring of football coaches. And, more than all else, a leader of men.

On behalf of the American Football Coaches Association, Coach Lou Little of Columbia has appointed Coach Herbert O. (Fritz) Crysler of Michigan, one of Mr. Stagg's former pupils, as the chairman of the committee in charge of the observance of the 50th Anniversary of this most notable of football careers.

Meanwhile, America's football enthusiasts join today in their salute to the man who has meant so much to the young men of this nation and to the sport which millions of us enjoy every Saturday afternoon during the autumn months.

Bravo, AMOS ALONZO STAGG! May your future on the gridiron be a long and a glorious one.

LEE HUBBY, MANAGER

Montana's Coaching Staff

Coach Doug Fessenden, Illinois '27, is in his fifth season at the University of Montana, as he leads his fighting Grizzly pack into the me'e'e this afternoon against Texas Tech's Red Raiders.

Curly-haired, friendly Doug Fessenden entered the Grizzly den in 1935 and it was in that year that his "iron-man" team played Washington. The Grizzlies were beaten then but the Fessenden forces scored and have the distinction of being the first team to cross the Husky goal-line that season. Since signing with Montana his teams have won 22 games, dropped 14 and tied three . . . that's minus this season's record.

Coach George "Jiggs" Dahlberg, former Montana athletic star, coached successful high school teams in both Montana and Washington before returning to his Alma Mater in 1936. "Jiggs" is Montana's line coach, a dependable, hard-working and trusted assistant of Fessenden's. Dahlberg has constructed powerful Grizzly forward walls in his years at Montana.

Coach Harry Adams, ex-Montana ace, is the oldest member of the staff, having been coach back in 1925. Adams is the Grizzly backfield coach and is chief of the Montana espionage system. He played football for the Grizzlies back in 1919-20 when Bernie Bierman, now at Minnesota, was Montana's mentor.

Coach John Dolan, end coach, joined the Fessenden regime last spring. Johnny was the scintillating end for Montana in the past three years and was good enough to rate Coast mention each year. His assistance has been valuable this year, especially when it comes to teaching sophomores.
