Townes Van Zandt – The “Texas Rain” Project - Footnotes From Tthe Archive

As long ago as the dawn of the nineties, stories abounded that a box set retrospective of Townes' compositions was in the pipeline. Initially it was said that two CD's would be involved. Over the years the project evolved into a vastly larger undertaking. Townes often joked during his last years that it would "appear after I'm gone." I guess he knew the truth. According to Kevin Eggers at New York's Tomato Record Company, "During the last several years Townes Van Zandt and I have been working on a major project. A four CD set containing sixty new digital recordings with 47 duets with many of our friends. Prior to Townes' death Townes had completed his vocals and guitar work on these important recordings. It is Townes at the apex of his creative career. It seems ironic that Townes and I would come full circle having first begun our friendship with his first recording for my company Poppy and his last major work for Tomato." The foregoing quote is now some four years old, and like everything else in the record industry, nothing remains the same [sic. "four CD set"]. At one stage the project bore the working title "Newology," while the songs featured and artists invited to record with Townes were intimated at one stage to be :
