Monday afternoon.

My Own Dear Sweetheart:-

Yesterday will linger with me for a long, long time as a pleasant sweet memory. Darling girl, every time I see you, you mean more to me than ever before and I love you more and more.

I wanted to write a long letter to you to-day but am not going to have the chance. We had a "blow-out" close to Round-up and had quite a time getting started again, but made it alright. Mrs McDonald died yesterday morning about eleven o'clock.

My sisters and Bro. Cole have reached an agreement on the exchange and sale of the places, I have not had time yet to think what is best for me to do. They will have to give possession next week.

Will try and get my thoughts together by tomorrow and tell you our plans & write more to my precious girl.

You will never know how much I love you, dear, one.

Yours
M. C.
