2. Mission:

- a. To develop and qualify individuals as basically trained soldiers.
- b. To train personnel to the level of efficiency and leadership required by their unit assignment.
- c. To specialize in the training of small tactical units to insure the degree of proficiency necessary for proper functioning and team work in the performance of their primary mission.
- d. To stress the triangular organizational concept of the Army. Our tactical doctrine being based upon this concept, our training must emphasize its application. Training will develop how it operates by finding and fixing with reconnaissance and a base of fire; having a maneuver element and a reserve, both of which may on occasion be employed simultaneously to deliver the decisive blow.
- e. To stress junior officer and NCO training in leadership, small unit tactics and the capabilities and employment of organic and supporting weapons.

3. General Plan:

- a. The training period will cover two (2) weeks, 28 June - 12 July 1953, both dates inclusive. One-half ($\frac{1}{2}$) day holiday is authorized 4 Jul 1953; one (1) day holiday Sunday 5 Jul 1953. Training hours will be 0700 hrs to 1200 hrs and 1400 hrs to 1700 hrs daily except 29 Jul 1953. Training will begin at 1300 hours 29 Jul 1953 only.

b. See Incl 2 for general allotment of subject hours for combat arms and technical service units. The primary function of each technical service unit is the maximum support of the Division during Field Training. Therefore, on-the-job training will be considered by this H₁ as fulfilling the requirements of Section and Platoon operational subjects.

c. North Fort Hood Texas is the training site for Field Training 1953,

d. Safety Procedures:

(1) The firing of all types of ammunition and weapons will be governed by the provisions of SR 385-310-1 and appropriate Field and Technical Manuals.

(2) Training in Infiltration Course is not authorized.

(3) Training in "Combat-in-Cities", "Close Combat Course", and "The Attack Course" will not be conducted with live ammunition.

(4) The use of live mines and booby traps will be confined to demonstrations only.

(5) Training in live demolitions will be conducted only by units authorized demolition sets in T/O&E's. This training will be conducted only for personnel required to use demolitions or to act as instructors in their use. Demolition training for other troops will be confined to demonstrations. This does not preclude use of firecrackers and small demolitions to simulate battle noises.

(6) It is desired that in all training maximum realism be developed without sacrifice of essential safety factors.

4. Detailed Plan:

a. Training Facilities: See Incl 1 for dates of assignments of training facilities to major commands. This inclosure will be used as the basis for development of unit schedules. For planning information a brief description of each facility is contained in Incl 4.

b. Detailed Schedules: The following organizational commanders will develop detailed schedules for each type unit within their command. These schedules will be on legal size paper, bound with manila covers, tabbed and submitted to this Headquarters in eleven (11) copies no later than 4 May 1953. The Form prescribed in Fig 5, FM 21-5, page 40, will be followed in the preparation of these schedules.

CG 36th Div Arty for the Div Arty (Incl Army Avn Section)

CO each Regt for all type units within the Regt

CO 111th Engr Bn for all type units within the Bn

CO 136th Tk Bn for all type units within the Bn

CO 36th Rcn Co for his unit

CO 111th Mod Bn for all type units within the Bn

CO 736th Ord Bn for all type units within the Bn

CO 36th Div Band for his unit

CO each Division Technical Service Company for his company. This schedule will provide for forty (40) one-hour periods of instruction in a sequence of related subjects and prepared for presentation to include training aids. This training schedule will be followed whenever personnel are not actually engaged in performing a service support mission for the Division.

c. Inclement Weather Schedule: In addition to schedules required in par b, above, an annex will be added totalling sixteen (16) one-hour periods of instruction in sequence of related subjects as an inclement weather schedule. The subjects will be prepared for presentation to include the training aids and lesson plans, and will be suitable for effective instruction to small groups indoors. Facilities for use of a film projector will not be available.

d. Training Aids: Those required to support the detailed unit schedules will accompany units to the training site. There is no Training Aid Center at North Fort Hood, Texas. Maximum use is to be made of equipment on hand. Training films will be limited and suitable facilities for their showing will not be available at North Fort Hood. See FM 21-8, "Military Training Aids," Sep 1950.

e. Troop Information Program:

(1) One (1) hour of schedules training each week will be devoted to a command conference at Company (Battery) level as a part of the Troop Information Program. Full attendance of all personnel of a unit is required with a make-up hour scheduled for that personnel which are unable to attend the regularly scheduled period of instruction.

(2) These conferences are to be conducted by highly qualified personnel, preferably the Battalion Troop I & E Officer.

(3) Headquarters Fourth Army will issue additional instructions relative to subjects to be discussed during these weekly conferences at a later date.

f. Range Firing:

(1) Personnel are required to fire for qualification once during a three-year period with the individual weapon with which armed. Qualified personnel will fire a familiarization course with the individual weapon with which 10% or more of the unit are armed.

(2) Members of crew served weapons teams or squads will fire a qualification course once during a three year period with the weapon served. Qualified personnel will fire a familiarization course once during the following two years with the weapon served.

(3) High standards of marksmanship will be stressed during known distance and field firing.

(4) The provisions of par 1, 2 and 3 above do not apply to personnel who have met these requirements during the armory training year.

g. Individual Training: Tactical training of the individual soldier, individual specialist training and qualification firing with individual weapons not completed in armory training will be emphasized. Individuals will be taught the capabilities of their individual and supporting weapons. Our weapons, properly employed, will accomplish the mission for which they were designed. A soldier's lack of confidence in his weapon indicates that he has not received effective and efficient training in its proper employment.

h. Unit Training:

(1) In order to accomplish the objectives contained in par 2 above, the following procedures will be followed:

(a) Unit integrity will be maintained in quartering personnel and in the conduct of training in order to develop successful team action, responsibilities of team members and the development of unit leaders. This does not preclude the use of the committee system where no other method is appropriate to the training situation.

(b) Unit training exercises will be conducted. In the preparation of these training exercises, the appropriate Army Training Test will be followed. Scoring systems comparable to those contained in the Army Training Test will be followed to the extent deemed beneficial to the training and progressive development of units and their leaders.

FTM # 1
Hq 36th Inf Div
23 Jan 53

(c) Training exercises will be thoroughly planned in advance and adapted to the training conditions and terrain at N Ft Hood, Texas. They will require the employment by units of the principles of simplicity, fire and maneuver, security, performance of functional duties and establishment of local security by all elements to include security against ground, mechanized and air attack.

(d) Briefings before exercises and critiques after exercises are deemed essential and desirable. Only that supervision and control necessary to insure maximum value to the unit undergoing the exercise will be used.

(e) For all units except Artillery, emphasis shall be at squad, section and platoon levels and in no case higher than the Company as follows:

UNIT	AFF TEST	ADMINISTERED BY

(f) The CG, 36th Div Arty, the CO each Regiment, CO 111th Engr Bn, CO 136th Tk Bn will appoint Boards of Officers to prepare for the conduct, administering, and scoring the training exercises to type units prescribed within their organization. Army Instructor personnel assigned to the organizations (with concurrence of SAI, Tex NG) will be members of such Boards as far as possible. Eleven (11) copies of each order appointing Boards and eleven (11) copies of the organizational plan for the conduct of the training exercises will be forwarded to this Headquarters with the detailed training schedules.

(g) Communications training will be stressed throughout the Field Training period. With the issuance of the new type radios, every effort will be made to complete instruction on procedures for proper operation and maintenance. Personnel assigned communication duties will be afforded maximum opportunity to gain proficiency by on-the-job performance of their duties.

i. Recruit Training Units:

(1) The organizations listed below will organize a recruit training company (Battery) for the conduct of training prescribed in Incl 3:

CG Div Arty for all elements of the Div Arty
CO each Regt for all elements of the Regiment
CO 111th Engr Bn. Personnel from 111th Med Bn, 136th Tk Bn, 736th Ord Bn and the Division Separate Companies will be attached to the Provisional Training Company, 111th Engr Bn, for training only.

Page 5
FTM # 1
Hq 36th Inf Div
23 Jan 53

(2) Instructor personnel will be carefully selected. Training aids to support the recruit training program will accompany units to the Field Training site. Recruit trainees may participate in selected exercises, field problems and demonstrations which cannot be duplicated at home station and which are judged to be of particular value to the soldier. Prior approval of the release from the prescribed training program will be obtained from this Headquarters.

(3) Recruit trainee personnel will be rationed, quartered and administered by parent units and will not be available for other duties during training hours.

(4) Personnel, without prior Army service, who enlisted after 1 January 1953 and are not now proficient in basic subjects or who are in need of retraining will be attached for this instruction.

(5) Training records (Forms 68, Score Cards, Tests) will be maintained on each individual receiving recruit training for later transfer to their permanent unit forms 68.

(6) All commanders are cautioned to bear in mind the status of training of each individual to be assigned to the recruit training unit. The accomplishment of the overall unit training mission must be considered so that no arbitrary or massed assignment from any one unit is made. A service support Company or Battery's mission is the continuous support of the major organization throughout Field Training and this mission cannot be slighted.

j. Training Areas: Training area assignments will be made in a training memorandum at a later date. For planning purposes, sufficient close-in areas will be available, adjacent to tent areas, for all units. Outer training areas will be assigned dependent upon the type training to be conducted. Generally, the training areas designated by Training Area Administration Map (Sheets 1,2,3) Camp Hood, Texas, Sep 1944 as Zone I A & B, Zone II, A thru F, Zone IV, A thru G, will be controlled and allocated by this Headquarters.

k. Food Service Instruction: A Fourth Army Food Service Team will conduct a four (4) day pre-camp Food Service School. This school will be conducted during the four-day period 24 Jun - 27 Jun including travel of detachments to the training site. The last day of instruction will provide on-the-job training in the messes where personnel are to serve during field training. Attendance will be on the following basis:

Officers: Two from 36th QM Co; one from 141st Inf; one from 36th Div Arty.

EM : Two (2) from each company or battery authorized T/O&E assigned Food Service personnel.

TOTAL : Four (4) officers; 214 EM

l. Division Review: A Division Review for all elements of the Division will be held from 0700-1200 4 July 1953. Details will be announced later.

m. Range Officers: The CG, 36th Div Arty, CO each regiment, CO each Separate battalion and company will appoint a range officer for their organization. This officer's duties will be to coordinate the use of ranges by his unit, control equipment, supply and re-supply for unit ranges, and be responsible for the orientation of using units as to police, safety regulations, medical aid, guards and communications. The name of the designated officer will be forwarded to this Headquarters with the unit training schedules on 4 May 1953.

n. Concurrent Training: Concurrent training will be conducted whenever possible. As examples, the following subjects lend themselves well to this type training.

SUBJECTS:

CONCURRENT TRAINING:

Employment of Armed Forces	Dismounted Drill; Intelligence training, Military Courtesy, Sqd Tactical training.

o. Lesson Plans: Will be prepared and followed for each training period. The responsible instructor and assistant instructor will have in his possession a completed lesson plan form (pp74-75, FM 21-5) covering the instruction being presented. Training inspectors from this Headquarters will check for compliance with this paragraph.

p. Military Courtesy: Military Courtesy is the outward indication of military training and discipline. Neglect or failure to render promptly and properly reflects seriously upon all members of the organization. Prior to Field Training and early in camp training, precise and complete instruction in this subject will be conducted. This training can be conducted concurrently with any instruction; however, it will be conducted as a related subject to the major subject being presented.

q. Unauthorized Training Assistance: No organization or unit of this Division will request training aids or assistance directly from active Army units at training site. Any condition necessitating such assistance will be brought to the attention of this Hq for coordination.

exact instruction and location of such instruction for the following training day. These extracts will include all authorized amendments to the schedules as submitted 4 May 1953.

s. Commanders will use maximum discretion during training to see that prolonged periods of exertion and overexposure to sun by personnel is avoided. No marches under forced conditions or special hardening exercises will be scheduled without approval of this Headquarters.

4. Administrative Instructions:

a. Ammunition, Pyrotechnics, Explosives: Credits will be requested at Division level for the entire Field Training period. The current basis for unit requisition and planning for training ammunition is TA 23-100, 7 Sep 1951.

b. Special Equipment: Any special equipment needed for training, which will not be issued or made available through National Guard channels, will be reported by major commanders to this Hq no later than 16 Feb 53 in a letter of request for and justification of its use. The attention of all concerned is invited to the necessity for maximum utilization of issued equipment; therefore, requests for special equipment must constitute an emergency before favorable action can be taken.

DEFICIENCIES NOTED DURING PRIOR FIELD TRAINING PERIODS

1. General: The following deficiencies, relative to training, which were noted during the 1952 field training periods by Hq Fourth Army, are for each commander's information and corrective action.

a. As was evident in previous years, many units are continuing to conduct classroom type of instruction when in the field. I have particular reference to preliminary marksmanship instruction, basic instruction in map reading and disassembly of individual weapons, nomenclature of weapons, and other basic types of instruction which lend themselves to armory training and should, therefore, be conducted at home stations. This does not apply to recruit training which will be discussed later.

b. In connection with the last remark, it was noted that machine gun crews were given instruction in manipulation, sight-setting and laying, immediate action, reduction of stoppages, etc., on the firing line. This type of training definitely can and should be conducted at home stations, thus permitting maximum use of range time for the actual conduct of firing, or it might be appropriately given as concurrent training behind the firing line.

c. It was also noted that tank gunnery in certain units was decidedly below standards. Results of firing in the unit indicated insufficient and/or ineffective training in basic gunnery procedures.

d. Since the subject of Aggressor has been previously mentioned, further discussion is not deemed necessary at this time. However, I would like to emphasize that Aggressor uniforms and limited amounts of pneumatic equipment are available upon request at all training sites. Field Manuals on Aggressor are available for issue from appropriate state publications depots.

e. Many junior officers were observed standing about doing nothing while noncommissioned officers were conducting the actual instruction. In many cases these noncommissioned officers were doing an excellent job. However, there were many instances where the instruction was ineffectual since it appeared that little, if any, preparation had been given the subject prior to presentation. While it is understood and appreciated that noncommissioned officers can expect to devote a great part of their military career to instructing, it is believed that assigning instruction to noncommissioned officers before they are properly trained to carry out such assignments is a waste of time, since the desired class interest and participation will not be aroused.

f. In some units, company commanders were devoting time to administrative functions during training hours. This should not be permitted. Since current Tables of Organization provide for administrative warrant officers down to company level, there is no need for the company commander to devote valuable training time to administration. Nothing should be permitted to interfere with his primary mission of training. This applies equally as well to all commanders.

g. More emphasis must be placed on the organization and operation of Fire Direction Centers and Fire Support Control Centers.

h. The preparation and use of Lesson Plans left much to be desired. The product of preparation is the Lesson Plan. It is the blueprint for instruction. It shows what material to teach, in which order to teach it, and what procedures to use. In effect, a Lesson Plan is a guide to help accomplish the teaching mission. A simple, but complete, example of a Lesson Plan is contained in FM 21-5. Lesson objectives and outlines to assist in preparing Lesson Plans are contained in each Subject Schedule. Commanders must insist upon carefully prepared Lesson Plans covering all phases of training. They must check to insure that this has been accomplished and further, they must insist upon rehearsals prior to the actual presentation of instruction.

i. In the conduct of instruction it was noted that far too much time was devoted to explanation at the expense of demonstration and application. Reduce explanation to the minimum. Use more demonstrations during the presentation stage. Demonstrations show soldiers how things are done and prepare them to apply knowledge in practical work. Finally, devote the maximum time to the application stage. Soldiers learn by doing! To acquire skill or to learn a particular subject, a soldier must use his knowledge in practical application. A soldier may have the knowledge but when he cannot apply that knowledge, the teaching job is only partially complete.

j. In some instances it was noted that considerable training time was lost through lack of detailed training programs. This deficiency can be corrected if major commanders require subordinate commanders to submit detailed training programs to their headquarters for approval sufficiently in advance of the scheduled field training period.

k. Full value was not received from all training due to lack of emphasis on, and failure to prepare, a concurrent training program.

l. Sufficient emphasis was not placed on the use of training aids. Training aids assist the instructor to stimulate the soldier's interest and understanding. Many instructors feel that they must have an elaborate type training aid in order to properly present the subject to a class. This is quite erroneous. In many cases the most effective training aid is the real object itself ... a weapon, radio, vehicle, or the terrain. The most valuable training aids are the neat, simple, practical, field-expedient types, which can be fabricated at little cost in time or money.

2. Food Service Deficiencies:

a. Inability of Food Service personnel to make prompt minor repairs on field ranges and immersion heaters.

b. Distribution of mess forms incomplete.

c. Confusion and lack of organization in unit messes.

d. Head count procedures and use of Cooks Work Sheet indicates a lack of proper training.

e. Shortage of spare parts for ranges and immersion heaters.

f. Cooks whites not on hand.

g. Meals prepared too early.

h. In the field, unit kitchens located in ravines, gullies and on slopes where rain created a serious drainage problem.

3. Location Signs: During bivouac of units in the field and when instruction was presented in the field there was a definite lack of signs to mark the location of such instruction. Signs are to be posted in conspicuous locations along major access roads to guide visitors and observers to CP's and in the field training.

4. Prompt Reporting to Visitors and Inspectors: An officer or NCO will be detailed to observe the approach of visitors and inspectors and report promptly to them the nature of the instruction or activity, present lesson plans, and answer such questions as may be asked concerning the activity.

5. Military Courtesy: This subject has been a glaring deficiency during the first days of Field Training and indicates a lack of emphasis during Armory training. All commanders to include the platoon leader, will begin now to indoctrinate their personnel on the prompt rendition of proper military courtesy at all times.

INTELLIGENCE TRAINING ANNEX

1. General

a. Intelligence and counter intelligence training for all personnel will be under unit control and will conform to the doctrine contained in FM's of the 30 series as well as FM 100-5 and FM 101-5.

b. The intelligence phase of training will be played in each tactical training exercise. Each man whether in a combat or service unit will be indoctrinated with his potential importance in the collection and reporting of military information.

c. Training should be carefully planned, prepared and supervised and should stress accuracy and completeness of information, promptness of reporting, and utilization of proper channels for reporting military information. Training should include:

- (1) Practical exercises in observation, identification, and reporting of enemy units.
- (2) Map reading and terrain studies.
- (3) Use of Shelling Reports (FM 6-130, FM 7-25, TM 9-1901).
- (4) Safeguarding of Military Information (AR 380-5).
- (5) Examination and handling of prisoners of war, captured documents and equipment.

d. Maximum use should be made of intelligence and counter intelligence training concurrently with other training by all units.

e. Aggressor should be employed at every conceivable opportunity. Unit intelligence officers should coordinate this activity with operations and training officers. Aggressor uniforms and equipment will be available at camp. Units will report requirements to this Hq not later than 15 Feb 1953.

2. a. Personnel assigned intelligence duties will be given a minimum of 40 hours specialized training under unit control. Units will submit training schedules by 4 May 1953 in eleven (11) copies.

b. Div Arty, Engr Bn, Tk Bn and other units with small number of intelligence personnel may arrange to attend training of infantry regiments if desired. Requests should reach this Hq not later than 1 Jun 1953.

c. Officers of Div Intelligence Section will be made available to units as instructors as desired, subject to obvious limitations. Requests should reach this Hq by 1 June 53.
