Other Candidates Introduced

Two other county candidates were introduced, Will L. Smith of Beaumont, who is a candidate for state representative, district 16, and Glen Gute, Port Arthur, candidate for county treasurer.

The two main speakers straws to determine order of their talks. Kent, who was first, said he knew the needs of the people and that he had lived in both Port Arthur and Beaumont, worked at id both the Gulf and Magnolia refineries and would be equally fair to both his "home towns." He declared his experience in public office qualified him for county judge. Citing his platform, Kent ilsted "all out for defense, greater harmony between precincts of the county, and an open-door practice for the operation of his office" as his aims. He would give the office of county judge "back to the people, where it belongs," he declared, and promised to put the county on a cash basis as soon as possible.

18 Years Association

Clyde Marchbanks said he did a platform as he was not making promises he could not fulfill.

He said the people wanted an honest and efficient man and he endeavored to remain both.

"It has been 18 years since I first became associated with the judge's office," he said, explaining he has served under two judges and 13 commissioners and was thoroughly familiar with the duties of county judge.

He promised to do his part to keep taxes as low as possible and said he would do his best to put the county on a cash basis and keep it there. -44
