My Darling Ella:

I write this from Louisiana.

To me it seems quite right to send you a letter from here. I never heard from you at all until this morning before I left Dawson, and then I received two letters at once. I came here to ship my things and return in the evening. I am worried more than I can tell, but for the present I will write nothing about it. I am afraid I will have trouble in getting a house. There is none in sight yet. Your father's letter came this morning. I may reply to-morrow by telegraph, as the press is on hand and will have to be put up. Freight bills have been numerous and extravagant

I don't know that I did anything specially to get your father to like us more. Perhaps it was our walk to Ennis Sunday.

You needn't be surprised to see me almost any day.

Excuse this short letter. After to-morrow I think I can write more and better. I know you would be uneasy about me if I didn't write to-day.

Good bye, darling.
